DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Le et al. (USPN 4,895,806).

Le discloses a device for liquid chromatography that comprises a housing having a porous substrates (sintered PTFE) employed at the inlet and outlet in or to improve diffusion and flow distribution; plurality of membrane discs stacking one on top of another that are composed of cellulose membrane (col.3, lines 17-36; col. 4, line 65 – col. 5, line 7; col. 6, lines 24-52; Figure 2; claim 1).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

Art Unit: 1743

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Le et al. (USPN 4,895,806) in view of Quinn et al. (USPN 6,149,816) and in further view of Cazer et al. (USPN 5,071,547).

Le discloses a device for liquid chromatography that comprises a housing having a porous substrates (sintered PTFE) employed at the inlet and outlet in or to improve diffusion and flow distribution; plurality of membrane discs stacking one on top of another that are composed of cellulose membrane (col.3, lines 17-36; col. 4, line 65 – col. 5, line 7; col. 6, lines 24-52; Figure 2; claim 1).

Le does not teach any information regarding the flow path of the pumps, valves, columns and detector.

Quinn teaches a chemical analysis which comprises a system for separating compounds through a specific flow path. The flow path consisting of a transfer pump, an injector, a switching valve, a column, a switching valve, a solvent mixer, a switching valve, a transfer pump, a switching valve, a separation column and a detector in this order. It would have been obvious to one having an ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made because this flow path is known in the industry of liquid chromatography for use of separating a plurality of compounds.

Neither Le nor Quinn disclose any information regarding to the state of holding or trapping the target component into the column.

Art Unit: 1743

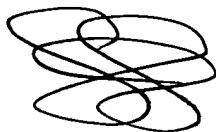

Cazer teaches a column chromatographic column apparatus that involves a step of trapping the target component in the column in order to increase the yield of the target component adsorbed on the column (claim 1; col. 2). Therefore it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the modified apparatus of Le to include a trapping function in order to increase the yield of the target component.
